LIVING

Thursday television

“Greys’s Anatomy” 8 p.m. ABC — A challenging surgery is performed, triggering powerful memories for Meredith, Richard, Owen and Stephanie.

“Rosewood” 8 p.m. Fox — A famous movie star dies after a photo shoot at the beach.

“How to Get Away With Murder” 10 p.m. ABC — Help from an unlikely source is sought by Annalise and Bonnie.

“The Blacklist” 10 p.m. NBC — Red pressures Dr. Shaw to locate a former patient.

RODNEY HO

Peach Buzz

Your daily roundup of celeb news and chatter

By Jennifer Brett, jbrett@ajc.com

Masked ball supports recovery efforts

The inaugural Take off the Mask of Addiction Masquerade Ball, held Oct. 22 at the Fox Theatre, raised funds and awareness for the center for Young Adult Addiction and Recovery at Emory University Atlanta Journal-Constitution sports columnist Jeff Schultz and his wife, Joanne Schultz, served as host couple. Last year, Jeff shared their son’s journey from addiction to recovery in an award-winning feature article, “Lost and Found.” It’s online at personaljourneys.ajc.com/lost-found.

Keynote speaker Stacey Weiss, who attended with her sister, shared her stepbrother’s journey through addiction and recovery. Teresa Johnston, director of the recovery center at KSU, detailed the center’s impact on the campus community and beyond.

After the program, live auctioneer Chris Dimino drew top dollar for items such as a studio visit to “The Best Show,” exotic trips and a private dinner with star chef Frank Abbondi. Live music and dancing completed the evening.

The gala was presented in support of the Atlanta Falcons and sponsored by Superior Plumbing, Archer Restoration Services, the Arthur M. Blank Family Foundation, The Atlanta Journal-Constitution and Georgia Power. Organizers are already looking forward to next year’s gala.

Artistic fundraiser aids research efforts

Pancreatic cancer is a stealthy monster. It creeps in without specific symptoms or early warning signs. It’s treatable when caught early, but all too often, that’s not the case.

In most cases, it’s diagnosed only after it has spread. It’s the most fatal of cancers. (One of its victims was author Pat Conroy, who died in March.) A group of artists is coming together in hopes of supporting efforts to change those dire stats.

ArtCan, bringing together talent from the Atlanta Ballet, the Atlanta Opera and the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra, is planning for 7 p.m. Nov. 19 at Flourish, 3143 Maple Drive, Atlanta. A VIP reception starts at 6 p.m.

The evening features dining, live and silent auctions and unique original performances and benefits research efforts at the Winship Cancer Institute at Emory University and Johns Hopkins University.

ArtCan, chaired by Pamela Monasra, honors Howard Young and the memory of Amy “Abele” Bending. Organizing committee members are Pamela Monasra, Grace Saunders, Beth Marconi-Law, Maureen Monasra, Monica Lodge, Patty Reizer, Tina Luna, Ray Miller, Jennifer Squillace, Carla Risha Wright, Terri Hirsh, Sara Tennery, Dean Cronover and Cheryl Choi.

Tickets start at $150.

See jcm-artcan.org.